This thessis descibes design and implementation of the application, which can design structure of program and then generate this structure to the source code of some real object-oriented language.
Various types of code generators are discussed in this work as well as design and format of files, which describe these leanguages, are examined. Work goes through desicions, that had to be made during analysis of the problem and subsequent implementation, including choice of programming language and libraries used in the application.