In our work, we explored multicollinearity problem from a complex point of view – from diagnostic methods to the solving of the problems which are caused by the multicollinearity. We compared the Least Squares method with some alternative methods – Principal Component Regression, Partial Least Squares Regression and Ridge Regression on the theoretical basis. In the last section, we demonstrated all methods on practical example computed in the program R.