

Diploma thesis “The competition in plural system of public health insurance of Czech Republic” deals with historical development of plural system in Czech Republic and its functions in the present time. The first part of this thesis deal with theoretical view of market mechanisms, medical systems, systems of health care financing, transformation of society and health valuation (assessment). Further part describes the development of plural system in Czech Republic from 1992 to 2009. The changes in this time period are mostly focused on morphological analysis of fundamental laws for public health insurance in Czech Republic. The second part of this thesis creates model of plural system by using instruments of real competition. The end of this thesis evaluates present contribution of plural system for society including its next possible development and possibilities of legislative changes and organizational changes going to this possible future development.