The thesis deals with the comparison of the two most important approaches towards the description of transgressives in the Czech language. The work tries to prove on the material of Czech national corpus the statements present in the linguistic descriptions of transgressives.

The first part contains the examined literature described from the view of function and form of transgressives and from the view of their use. The most important and significant theories are compared. Simultaneously, the first part examines the critical moments of these theories, their inaccuracies.

The second part is the research. All the material is taken from the Czech national corpus. The critical points defined in the first part are examined here.
