

Bachelor thesis “Old age, dying and death – from theory to practice” focuses on the issue of terminally ill people. It defines old age and deals with the interrelation with the society. It researches most common age, causes and places of death and searches the care possibilities for the terminally ill.

The aim of the bachelor thesis is to research the interrelation between the society and old age, level and quality of existing lenitive care. Furthermore the thesis aims to define the possibilities of hospice care in the Czech Republic. The crucial aim of the thesis is to offer a solution for dignified dying and death for Mr. B., who worked with me on the empirical part of this thesis.

The research method used in this bachelor thesis is qualitative monitoring by casuistry treatment method.