The task of the work is to implement a simulator of evolution of artificial life and make experiments with this application. The evolution is based on simple organisms which are evolved by natural choice. Genome of organisms consists of set of some parameters. Simulator distinguishes species of organisms and kinds of food. Application could be run by a script and it provides saving statistics information.