

This presented work is focused on the topic of so called Goll's School. It pays its attention to the foreign stays of Jaroslav Goll's oldest students (Josef Pekař, Josef Vitezslav Simak, Jaroslav Bidlo and Ladislav Hofman), which are situated to the period of "long 19th century". The point of it was to show some concrete perspectives of examining the term "Goll's School", which does not have to be treated as just a methodological group. The main features are Jaroslav Goll as a charismatic tutor, his organization skills or social net of personal relations. These all eventually put together few historians, who are today known as Goll's School.
