

The theme of this work is the development of Russian-Japanese relations in East Asia in the international context and in the context of domestic politics in both countries. The aim of this work is examining the relationship of Russia and Japan from past to present, deriving the basic obstacles to the rapprochement of both countries and suggestion of appropriate solutions for future developments.