

To accompany a woman at the birth of a new life and to support her at the delivery itself – that is what a profession of a midwife represents for most of the people. Unfortunately, there are also some unpleasant events that may occur in obstetrics.

Endouterine death of fetus may often occur without previous warning symptoms of otherwise standard pregnancy. Due to the fact of sudden emergence and a possibility of health threat of the woman, fast solution is essential.

I think, I managed to elaborate foetus mortus topic in a comprehensible way and to fulfill the aim of my thesis. Crucial points in attendance care of a woman in childbed with foetus mortus diagnosis were clarified, acquired findings were processed and possible practical measures were suggested.
