

This thesis examines the role of the head of the family and summarizes the means of origin and cessation of the headship, the discretions and duties of the head of the family and of the family council in the first half of the 20th century.