

This master's thesis aims to define the electronic media effects on the individual in the present society in order to study how the perception of real has changed in relation to the invention of virtual reality.