

ABSTRACT

The main content of this Thesis is the second home as a part of tourism and recreation - very popular form for leisure time.

The aim of the Diploma Thesis is to monitor changes in the second home in a protected landscape area Kokořínsko. The comparison of the second home in Sudetenland and in the Protectorate of Bohemia and Moravia is emphasised. Although this district did not belong to the important areas of the second home from the very beginning, after the Second World War Kokořínsko became more developed, mainly in the terms of cottage building.

The Thesis is divided into several parts. Individual parts are important for understanding the second home in this district. The Thesis deals with a brief history of the second home in Kokořínsko and characterises the Sudetenland with the whole area from the point of view of development and localization.

Concerning research methods, the Thesis uses mainly a field research method, a questionnaire survey and a statistic data research.

Key words: a second home, protected landscape area Kokořínsko, folk architecture, Sudetenland