

Influenza is a very common infectious respiratory diseases caused by the influenza virus. Every year, affects a huge number of people. The greater part of them will be without serious consequences. However, there are groups of people who may Flu cause serious complications, thus increasing the number of hospitalizations and also causes many deaths. In the case of the disease younger people leads to inability to work due to large economic losses. In the Czech Republic is not seasonal flu majority of the population perceived as a serious condition. A possible step in preventing Flu hygiene rules, in addition to the vaccination which should be addressed. The aim of the diploma work is to present approaches of some European countries to vaccinate, promotion, financing and impact of these measures the degree of coverage.