

The aim of this work is to give an overview of methods for solving linear semi-infinite programming problems. The work also discusses various types of cutting plane method for semi-infinite programming problems. The work involves implementation of two types of this method in programming language Octave and the behavior of these methods is shown on examples.