

The thesis “The Policy with an emphasis to reduce the long-term unemployment of people with primary education in selected region - Ústecko” deals with the labour market and educational system within the local level. The current labour demand prefers workers with qualification, expert knowledges and skills. Therefore, the possibilities of people with primary education to find a job are decreasing. Regarding these facts, people with low qualification are threatened by long-term unemployment.

Contemporary services of state employment policy in Ústí nad Labem do not focus on people with primary education. As well as the educational system within this region is deficient. Despite the fact that some applicants for a job are not motivated enough or willing to study, the education system is not flexible and thus, applicants have only limited opportunities for further education and for receiving vocational certificates or graduation diplomas. According to above mentioned facts, this thesis deals with an educational policy as fundamental element for prevention of the long-term unemployment of people with primary education. In subsequent chapters, thesis focuses on employment policy, especially its active forms and instruments. Conclusion contains offered recommendations, which are aimed to reduce the long-term unemployment of people with primary education, increasing educatedness of inhabitants, increasing employment of these people and their motivation to work, train, study and fight against prejudices and discrimination on the labour market.