

The Diploma Thesis, The repeated offenders in the execution of a punishment who are in prison, is about the people who have been punished at least once by imprisonment and now they are in prison again. These people have already passed the treatment which should have had a positive influence on their behaviour after their release from prison. However, there has been a criminal activity again for some reasons. The thesis investigates the attitude and opinions of the final participants of resocializing programmes, the employees of tertiary prevention and the repeated offenders. The aim of this thesis is to find out the reasons of their behaviour.
