Pax Christi.

Filiati oculis amantissimam Adm. Rev. Paternit. Vra. gratulam de genibus meis nuper veneratus sum, ex qua in non modicam spem veni, fore ut felici Missionariorum Chilenus Regni manibus annue-raret, sed ut ex numero electorum reticere licuit, ab eo exclusum me non sine dolore animadverti. Quod si numerus eorum necdum completus est, Adm. R. Paternit. Vra. precibus suppliciter adrol-lor, unice obsecrans, ut si Deo gloria, et mea aliarumq. animarum utilitas aliqua et salus speratur, ipsdem me socium itineris, et laborum aggregare dignetur. Ceterum non ideo haec scribo, ut repetitis meis precibus exorquetur potentiam, eundem cum ad nutum & voluntatem divinam totum me, utique suam, committam, sed ut periam inspirationi divina, et vicia mea in sinum paternum Adm. R. Paternit. Vra. deponam. Quibus me ad omnem omnino dispositionem et nutum affectu et filiali obsequantia iterum iterumq. commendo

Admodum Reverende Paternitatis Vestrae
