

This master's thesis focuses on studying the contemporary society as a cinematographic society, the society in which people are significantly influenced by the effect of film techniques and images.