

ANOTATION

Zuzana Holubova

The importance of dispatcher-assisted basic life support in the CPR

Bachelor thesis deals with the importance of telephone-assisted CPR in the CPR. The theoretical part introduces the concept of first aid, its meaning and its legislation. It focuses on cardiopulmonary resuscitation in the light of the context of the formation and development of life-threatening conditions and introduces the concept of telephone-assisted CPR and its important role in providing basic life support.

The focus is the empirical part, which is prepared on the basis of quantitative research prepared by a questionnaire survey. The sample consists of 80 participants from non-medical public Hradec Kralove region, residing in the district of Nachod. The aim of the research is to map the importance of telephone-assisted CPR in the provision of basic life support.