

Settlement system of the Czech Republic is typical by a big number of small municipalities. Those municipalities has the same status as bigger municipalities. However those small municipalities manage with limited resources for their development. Some authors discuss about possibility of their integration. This thesis is about the problematics of small municipalities and it focuses on the smallest ones and it shows their activity and capability of existence.

key words: development of the municipality, very small municipalities, rural