The present paper aims to explore fine art photography of František Drtikol between years 1929-1935. Most of these photos were pictures of artificial figures made by author himself. The paper also tries to tell, if all of fineart photos of 1929-1935 can be called „photopurism“ and make some of more distinctive of them known to reader. Drtikol's spiritual background is also examined and possible interpretation of artworks is attempted.
