

The theme of this thesis is a motive of split personality in Czech prose. My aim was to determine how the topic was elaborated in Czech and world literature and in specific cases to show the different types of split personality. Much of the work is focused on specific works of Czech literature of the 20th century. I analyzed this motif in both literary and psychological terms. In each of these works is another type of split personality, but you can compare some common features.