

Abstract

Diploma thesis „The analyse of educational needs of workers in low-threshold clubs for children and adolescents“ deals with actual thema of education of skilled workers in social services.

Theoretical part of thesis deals with definifion of term low-threshold club for children and adolescents, legal base of this service in the law systém of social services, provided services and with target group. In next chapter is introduced scholastic system of education of social workers, defined profile of graduates at college or university study and legal demands on education of workers of social services. In the last chapter of theoretical part we introduce profile of worker in low-threshold club for children and adolescents, with demands of personal qualities and exigencies on his or her expertness.

Practical part of thesis deals with analyse of educational needs of workers in low-threshold clubs in Prague and district of Střední Čechy. At the beginning we introduce each distrikt and audiodiagnostic method used for analyse. Results of analyse are dealt with proposal of educational courses, which are focused at workers of low-threshold clubs. On the basis of results comparison are designed areas of courses and their content.