

Designed as a comparative study, this master's thesis aims to evaluate the process of community planning of social services in Ústí nad Labem and Most, considering particularly the personal perspectives of the participants in the process, in particular their expectations, the assets, the potential changes they would propose. It is based on secondary data analysis combined with interviews.