

Discriminating and positive discriminating aspect in realization of human rights guarantees

This work disserts of discriminating and positive discriminating aspect in realization of human rights guarantees.

First chapter is a general introduction of human rights – inclusive of their characteristics, classification and essential attributes. Second chapter about history analyses evolution of human right from antique to present – above all question equal and unequal treatments. Central chapter this work is about discriminating Laws – first o of all about a new antidiscriminating Act in Czech Republic. Further expound terms such as direct discrimination, indirect discrimination and generally discrimination individual because their racial and ethnic, age, sex and gender, caste, religion, language, sexual orientation, disability. Next interprets a reverse discrimination or too opinion of political ideology etc. Last chapter includes guarantee protection of human rights – i.e. international, European, national realization of prohibition discrimination and enforcement of equal and unequal treatments.

This work is discretion about positive effect of discriminating Laws also their possible difficulty.