

Abstract

The work is focused on Czech private high schools, non-profit (OPS) and commercial (Ltd., Inc.), their common features and differences in the operation. Emphasis will be placed on the typology of these schools, their mode of financing and management principles on which different types of school costs. The aim of the work will determine the status of OPS schools compared to other types of private schools and the opportunities for private schools in the CR in terms of their management and financing. The source of information will be legislation, statistical data, annual reports and documents the organization of Ministry of Education and the Accreditation Commission for CR, thesis will be therefore based on an analysis of documents.