

Diploma thesis “Talk show Uvolněte se, prosím and its political guests (qualitative and quantitative analysis of politicians’ attendance in the show)” deals with the topic of convergence of entertainment and politics, hence politics and the media as such. The theoretical part of the thesis deals with the wider context of the issue – presentation of the politicians on television, interconnection of politics and humor, and the role of talk shows in political communication. The theoretical part presents the issue of political celebrities as one of the factors that affect communication between the politicians and the citizens. The practical part deals with the qualitative and quantitative analysis of the political guests’ performance in the czech version of American talk shows Uvolněte se, prosím.