

A description is presented of the Czech language situation, its stratification, the role of the varieties of the Czech national language in communication and its lingual didactic consequences. We describe the methods of teaching foreign languages and discuss literary and ungrammatical Czech when taught as a foreign language.