

This thesis describes election campaigns of the Communist Party of Czechoslovakia in interwar Czechoslovakia. The author examines the development of Communist electoral propaganda and agitation before parliamentary elections in 1925, 1929 and the 1935. This paper deals mainly with the changing attitudes of the Communist Party to the political system and the other political parties.