Title of Thesis: Acne therapy: comparison of treatment and patients' experience

This thesis deals with the clinical aspects of the therapy of acne. In theoretical part, basic facts about acne together with current pharmacological options of its treatment have been summarised. The non-pharmacological methods have been covered as well.

In experimental work, data (the occurrence of acne in the population in relation to sex, environment, season and the therapy used) obtained from patients' health cards, and information obtained from the patients through a questionnaire have been evaluated and compared.
