SUMMARY:

Bachelor thesis “Perioperative care from the point of view of a nurse anaesthetist” presents a perioperative period as a part of comprehensive medical care. The theoretical part of the theses introduces a role of a nurse anaesthetist as a participant in perioperative care. There is described required operating theatre equipment as well as preparation of patients and care before, during and after anaesthesia.

A focus of the theses is an empirical part based on a quantitative research realized by non-standardized questionnaire research. The research records sequence of care for patients, a level of cooperation and possible risks for patients during a perioperative period.

Fifty respondents from nurse anaesthetist community took part in the research in August 2010; 25 of respondents work in Faculty Hospital Královské Vinohrady Prague; 25 of respondents work in Faculty Hospital Brno.
