The bachelor's thesis deals with the status of nurses in the health care team. It summarizes the development of view of nurse and her position in comparison with the historical development of nursing as a discipline. It describes the system of nursing education and the distribution of competencies within a multidisciplinary team. It emphasizes the need for effective communication and cooperation.

The empirical part is a quantitative survey aimed at mapping the current status of nurses and working environment in their teams. The research sample consisted of nurses working without professional supervision in the hospital in Česká Lípa.
