

Informedness of high school students about contraception

Bachelor thesis deals with the informedness of high school students about contraception. The thesis analyzes the types of contraception and describes it in detail incl. its history. Marginally it concerns induced abortion. It defines the conception of adolescence and contraception.

For the surveyed samples of respondents have been chosen students of grammar schools who have been divided into two groups according to their age:

a) completed 15 – 17 years and b) completed 18 – 20 years

The results from both groups have been compared in tables and diagrams.

The knowledge between girls and boys is compared in the second part of the research.

Everything is once again compiled in tables and diagrams.

The output of this thesis is a brief informed leaflet containing a comprehensive overview of contraception.
