

The thesis here being displayed is concerned theoretic definitions of the juvenile delinquency's causes from the special pedagogy's and relative sciences point of view and it investigates the forms of solution of this problem within the Czech criminal law and justice system. The thesis is comparing these mentioned theoretic definitions with the qualitative research results that was proceeded as a comparative case study on the youngsters-clients of The Probation and Mediation Service in the district of Pardubice city. The thesis is based on the mentioned research and it is verifying the validity of the theoretic juvenile delinquency factor conceptions and it is assessing the effects of the community sanctions and measures that are meant for delinquent youngsters.