

Student Name: Panagiotis Dilmperakis
Title: Development of swimming in Greece

Type of work search is more than the historical and factual. Topic of student work was proposed because of the former swimming career and on the basis of student interest in swimming courses throughout the study. Literature deals with the development of the oldest swimming record of swimming and competitive swimming until 2010. The information presented in this work are, considering to sources on the development of swimming in Czech Republic, interesting but not solid.

Demands placed on students in terms of the theoretical treatment was rather time-consuming and language, because all information needed to translate into English. Here we see the biggest problem handling. It is a pity that the student presents information superficially and does not try to interpret a historical event in the context of the subject work.

Communication with students took place in the first stage on a regular basis. The proposed topic, the student repeatedly misunderstood and presented text was not approved by the supervisor. After a long period of time a student re-consulted outline of the text that match the parameters already specified work. When student move into his country, regular communication took place, but communication was difficult because of linguistic reasons.

After returning from his native country, the student actively involved in consultations and tried to comply with all instructions from their supervisors. Unfortunately, not all were met, as the leading work presented.

The student has shown that it is able to work hard on a given topic, and I believe that with further study and work in itself can work independently to solve simple professional problems.

Questions for the defense:

How to understand the concept of "historical information"?

How could you better prepare a written section on the period from 1950 to 2010?
