

This thesis is concentrated on hydrology of peatlands especially on their hydrological regime and water quality. The thesis is to be regarded as a preparation for a future detailed research, which will employ the elaborate literature search. The main results therefore are the basic information about their distribution, peatland flora and fauna and their important aspect of scientific and practical then about hydrology of peatland and water quality.