

This work is about the influence of language on the children's conception of numbers. The object of the research were children of primary school. In the theoretical part, the work is based on the result of J. Piaget's research and the experiments of L. S. Vygotskij. The practical part, influenced by the method of A. R. Lurija, describes the experiment in which children were solving different tasks that would reveal their understanding of numbers.