

Work is devoted to a specific type of internet communicative - blogs. Specifically, the characteristics of the language side of blogs on the Czech internet are analysed. Blogs are initially characterized as a whole. In the next section a possible classification of blogs and their operational division into two main groups, that are in other chapters further characterized, are adduced.