

This bachelor thesis deals with interactive communication from the sight of marketing communication. As a result it applies the findings on the Czech cosmetics brand Ryor. The thesis consider a deeper consequences of interactive communication with culture as well as social interaction. One part of this work is theoretical communication model of interactivity and study of basic elements of relations between members of a communication act. All these conclusions are at the end applied on the real activities of Ryor brand.