

Bachelor thesis „Quality of working life in selected groups of nurses“ presents a comparison of quality of working life of nurses in intensive care units and nurses in department for long-term illnesses. Theoretical part deals with the presentation of basic knowledge of quality of life and quality of working life. The following are the roles of nurses and characteristic of general activities carried out by nurses. Furthermore it focuses on the type of workplaces, where it conducted its own research.

Own research was conducted using questionnaires. Their task was to collect data that corresponds to indicators of quality of working life and can evaluate quality of working life. The data were evaluated using tables and graphs and results were compared with each other.

Then the results were compared with the results of a survey conducted by the Center for research of public opinion by Sociological Institute of the Academy of Sciences.