

Abstract

The subject of this thesis is Constitutional Court proceedings. The Constitutional Court of the Czech Republic and its proceedings are still topical owing to important cases which influence not only the broad public but also the course of events in general.

This judicial body responsible for the protection of constitutionalism has made a mark with a number of important cases and judicatives. It has issued a lot of awards which represented a major intervention in our law system. Hence, the judicature of the Constitutional Court becomes a key part of the constitutional practice, and it has started to significantly influence legal practice in general.

In my thesis I have focused on the procedural law aspects of proceedings before the Constitutional Court while trying to highlight the significance of this constitutional institution