

Abstract

The subject of this bachelor thesis is an alternative form of tourism, the youth independent travelling, which is an increasingly important aspiration for young people around the world. Theoretical part describes specific traits of young travellers, the evaluation of tourism in Prague and it draws attention to the issues of concentration of tourism. Practical part of the thesis focuses on research of young travelers and their perception of Prague. It evaluates information sources and reveals missing active products even though this area has great potential for alternative tourism forms. The thesis evaluates current situation and suggest new solutions.

Keywords

Youth tourism, young travellers, individual tourism, independent travelling, tourism in Prague, overcrowded Prague center