

The demonstrative determinant actualizes and identifies noun in utterance by referring to the situation of communication, linguistic context, or to shared experience. The demonstrative pronoun represents totally, partially or conceptually its antecedent, which is contained in the situation of communication or linguistic context. Both parts of speech contribute to coherence and better orientation of the reader in academic text.