

Abstract

This study focuses on birth order and it deals with its influence on human personality. It concerns early human ontogenesis, possible causes and ecological-evolutionary explanations of differences between siblings. It also emphasizes affecting factors. The thesis pursues general characteristic of only childs, firstborns and laterborns including findings of psychologists and confrontates it with results of experimental studies. The main discused spheres are personal attributes, marriage and partnership area and study abilities.