This bachelor's work deals with theoreticaly possibilities of foreign language education. It is focused on specific phenomenon as bilingualism and multilingualism. It considers using alternative methods in foreign language education and thinks about potential way of development to use common artificial language. The object of this work was to offer a broad view to individualization in teaching languages and to motivate to use and combine different methods.