

ABSTRACT

The aim of this Bachelor thesis is to describe the division of the roles in a family in three different historical periods - in a pre-industrial period, a post-industrial period and at last, the division of the family roles in the period from the end of the World War II up to the present is described. To characterize the family models in particular periods I use specialized literature, which deals with the historical development of a Czech and European family, with the importance of a family and with the position of all members in a family in a specified period. In the chapter, which discusses a post-modern family, I compare data from some empirical researches, which were carried out in the Czech Republic in the time period from the 1990s up to the present and which deal with family roles division and also with some respondents' opinions on this issue. I will try to find out, how these opinions have during this period changed.
