

The aim of this thesis is to analyze the cultural and political context around the issue of a scandal unleashed by an editorial written by H. G. Schauer. Our two questions are to put Schauer's pessimism into context of the critical thinking of the 1880s that has brought change in the perception of national identity.