Legal Instruments for Protecting the World’s Forests from the Perspective of Law

The aim of this thesis was to create an overview about the legal instruments for the world's forests protection with excursions into other instruments, i.e. political, scientific and voluntary. In order to achieve this goal, the text starts with a brief description of the importance of forests for the everyday life on the Earth, continues with the main part listing the legal instruments for protecting the forests at the national, European and international law level and ends with the discourse on voluntary instruments and certifications for world's forestry.
