

Abstract

Topic of the thesis is war in North Africa. The goal is to show a quality of Czech literature (books, magazines) focused on the situation in North Africa during the Second World War. Firstly, I present the methods of my research and show a content of the thesis. Secondly, there is a historical introduction about wars in North Africa, to give some general information to the reader. The main part, as already mentioned, is about comparing the Czech writings. General possibilities of sorting the war history according to its focus have been presented. The first part, orientated to the magazines, is divided in relation with the traditional system of military history – articles are compared in its folder. The second part – comparison of publications is organized due to a time line because all the books are examples of modern military history. The beginning of the time line is the spring Rommel's offensive in 1942. The end is demonstrated by the battle at El Alamein and a withdrawal of the Africa Corps. The conclusion contains all the knowledge about the comparisons which has been achieved during this research.