

SUMMARY

Main themes of the thesis are the Czech medics in the First World War and their war experience. The thesis is divided into four chapters.

The first chapter focuses on the medical service and status of a medic in Austro-Hungarian army up to the 1918. The second chapter targets the start of the First World War and time and circumstances of the mobilization of the Czech medics. The Third chapter is dedicated to the issue of medics' stay in the area of battlefield. The fourth chapter is focused on the Czech medics' view on themselves and the First World War. It also points out other combatants' view on the Czech medics.